

Anti-Harassment and Workplace Conduct Policy

All employees are expected to maintain a professional and respectful work environment, free from harassment and discriminatory behavior. Harassment can take many forms, including but not limited to verbal or physical conduct, visual displays, or written communication that creates a hostile or intimidating atmosphere. As described under the Employee Performance Review Cycle Policy, performance issues related to harassment may be addressed during regular performance reviews, with the goal of improving employee behavior and preventing future incidents.

Any employee who believes they have been subjected to harassment or discriminatory behavior is encouraged to report the incident to Human Resources (HR) within 5 business days of the event. HR will promptly investigate all complaints, taking steps to maintain confidentiality for all parties involved to the extent legally possible. This includes protecting the identity of complainants and respondents from disclosure, as well as refraining from discussing the details of the complaint with unauthorized individuals.

As part of its investigation, HR may also review relevant documentation, including emails, memos, or other written communication that may be relevant to the complaint. In some cases, this may involve reviewing procurement and purchase approval procedures to determine whether any procurement decisions were influenced by discriminatory behavior. As described under the Procurement and Purchase Approval Procedure policy, all procurement decisions must be made in accordance with established policies and procedures, without regard to personal characteristics or affiliations.

The company is committed to providing a safe and respectful work environment for all employees, and will take all necessary steps to prevent harassment and discriminatory behavior. This includes providing training on workplace conduct and harassment prevention, as well as establishing clear consequences for violating this policy. Any employee found to have engaged in harassing or discriminatory behavior may face disciplinary action, up to and including termination of employment.
